

Executive Sous Chef Craig McMullen

During his study of culinary arts at Johnson and Wales in South Carolina, Craig interned at the five-star Cloister at Sea Island, Georgia. Upon completing his degree, Craig dedicated two years to airline catering for a number of major transcontinental airlines, as well as for private flights.

Craig then moved to the Tower Club Restaurant in Washington, DC, and later to the cozy Fern Street Bistro and the Elysium in Burke, Virginia, where he served up gourmet delights. Craig later attended L'Academie De Cuisine and specialized in pastry and baking. As executive chef at the Morrison Hotel, he helped to maintain the hotel's four-star rating.

In 1998, he joined the celebrated staff at the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center.
